AN INTRODUCTION TO THE CHORAL SERVICE

BY CHORAL SERVICE is designated that manner of rendering the services of the Church in which the major portion allotted to the officiating clergy is sung by them, and not read; such responses as may occur likewise being sung by the people.

Until the English Reformation provision was made by the Church for the musical rendering of all her chief services; through the medium of prescribed musical formulae, or of melodies identified with the texts whose introduction into the Liturgy they had usually accompanied.

In 1544 the English Litany was published, together with an adaptation to the accustomed musical formulae made by Archbishop Cranmer himself. The first Prayer-book of Edward VI was issued in 1549 as a book of words only, unaccompanied by the musical setting of any text. Its rubrics, however, directed that certain parts of the Communion Service should be sung by the "clerkes"; that the Epistle and Gospel (likewise the lessons in Morning and Evening Prayer) might be sung by the Ministers; and that Gloria in excelsis and the Creed should continue to be intoned by the Priest, who might also sing the Prayer of Consecration. Moreover the recurrent use of the word say obviously continued the accepted contemporary sense of the Latin dicere, signifying monotonic recitation with or without inflections. These facts all bear witness to the intention of making the continued choral rendering of the services at least permissive. That the melodies for this purpose were not given official publication at the time may readily be understood, since they were generally familiar and easily adaptable to the vernacular form of the texts; just as certain portions of the texts were merely indicated in the book, knowledge of them on the part of the clergy being assumed: e.g., the endings of many of the Collects, the ending of the Preface for Trinity Sunday, and the rules for occasional liturgical variations. Furthermore, the minds of the reformers and of the Church were occupied with liturgical matters of far greater importance. It is significant, however, that within a year after the First Prayer-book came into use appeared THE BOOKE OF COMMON PRAIER NOTED; the work of John Merbecke, published cum privilegio in 1550.

This book provided, in melodic form and in the contemporary Gregorian modes and manner, "so much of the order of Common Prayer as is to be songe in churches": Mattins, Evensong, the Holy Communion, and the Burial Office, with special music for the Holy Communion at a burial. The omission of the Litany was undoubtedly due to its prior publication.

Although the first Edwardine book was not long in use, it might be assumed that this book of Merbecke should offer to the Church today a complete compendium of the Choral Service, worthy of adoption as having been associated with the English Liturgy since its very beginning. But the Liturgy in English was not a creation of the Church in 1549; it was a compilation of existing liturgical matter heretofore in use in the Church for years, in part, for centuries; and in which every effort was made to preserve the essential form of the services substantially as handed down from earlier times. By these standards as well must be judged any musical setting of the services, inasmuch as it is so closely associated with the Liturgy itself. The following comparison will demonstrate the relative extent to which Merbecke availed himself of traditional forms, or composed new melodies:

Morning and Evening Prayer

	Pre-Reformation Use	Merbecke
The Preces	Prescribed melodic formulae	Adaptation of same
Venite and Psalter	Gregorian Tones	Gregorian Tone VIII
Te Deum laudamus	The Ambrosian melody	The same, much simplified after the manner of Abp. Cranmer
Benedicite	Gregorian Tones	Tonus Peregrinus
Benedictus	Gregorian Tones	Gregorian Tones V, VIII
Magnificat	Gregorian Tones	Gregorian Tones I, VIII
Nunc dimittis	Gregorian Tones	Gregorian Tones V, VII
Apostles' Creed	Monotone with inflections	Monotone
Athanasian Creed	Gregorian Tones	Gregorian Tone IV
Lord's Prayer	Monotone with inflections	Monotone
Suffrages	Monotone with inflections	Ancient use
Collects and Prayers	Monotone with inflections	Monotone

For the purpose of a congregational or choir service-book, (for such it actually was) the provision of a single Gregorian tone for each Cantic was of practical value, and by no means precluded the substitution of alternate tones. Otherwise Merbecke's settings preserved intact the ancient use only in the single instance of the Suffrages after the Creed.

The Holy Communion

	Pre-Reformation Use	Merbecke
Kyrie eleison	Prescribed melodic settings, varying in elaboration according to rank of season or feast	Adaptation of an ancient melody, 10th century
Gloria in excelsis	Prescribed melodic settings, varying in elaboration according to rank of season or feast	Original melody, Gregorian in character, but very simple
The Nicene Creed	Prescribed melodic settings, chiefly variants of traditional melody	Original melody, Gregorian in character, very simple
Sanctus	Prescribed melodic settings, varying with feast or season	Adaptation of an ancient melody, 10th century
Benedictus	Prescribed melodic settings, varying with feast or season	Adaptation of an ancient melody, 10th century
Agnus Dei	Prescribed melodic settings, varying with feast or season	Original melody, Gregorian in character, very simple
Gloria tibi	Inflection formula	Monotonic
Sursum corda	Fixed melodic setting	Monotonic
The Lord's Prayer	Fixed melodic setting	Adaptation of ancient ferial chant
Post-Communions	Individual melodies	Melodies based on antiphons
Prayers	Inflection formula	Monotonic
The Blessing	Inflection formula	Monotonic

Merbecke's substitution of a Gregorian tone for the ancient melodies at the Introit was necessitated by the adoption of a whole Psalm to replace the traditional Antiphon and Psalm-verse. The Introit form of the tones was not used, however, either for the Psalm or for Gloria Patri.

It is indisputable that the definition of an authentic and uniform musical setting of our chief services, of a character worthy of its high office in point of fidelity to ancient tradition and practice, is greatly to be desired. The musical rendering of the service is enjoined upon no parish by canonical rule; but for such as desire to avail themselves of it, it is obvious that uniformity of method and of musical text is not less important than the same condition with respect to other fundamental elements of liturgical practice.

The gradual decline in ceremonial observance following the English Reformation affected the perpetuation of the traditional musical rendering of the services. By the time of the Restoration this tradition had become lost to a large extent; partly through the banishment of the Prayer-book offices during the Puritan ascendancy, and partly through the simultaneous destruction of Cathedral libraries and music. Although the singing of the services was resumed after the Restoration, at least in Cathedral and Collegiate establishments, it was not until the latter part of the nineteenth century that anything like real progress was achieved toward restoring to general use the traditional formulae and melodies of the ancient service. As practiced in many English Cathedrals, a simple monotone had been employed for the greater part, if not for the whole of the services; more in order that the ministers "might beste be hearde of all such as be present" than for the purpose of embellishment of the office, or of perpetuating ancient practice.

The Anglican school of Church music is essentially a harmonic system, evolved largely under the influence of the Cathedral choir. The very general substitution of the Anglican chant for its prototype, the Gregorian, has been quite as generally accompanied by the use of harmonized choral Responses, especially at Morning and Evening Prayer: the services daily rendered with a choir, in which the settings of Tallis, made in 1564, have become an almost universally accepted Cathedral use. The beauty of these settings, when well rendered, is undeniable, as is their suitability for festal occasions; but they are less well adapted to ordinary congregational use than the unisonous melodies or formulae which are the Church's own heritage from ancient times, which she wisely perpetuated for the use of all her people, and upon which the settings of Tallis were not wholly based.

The Choral Service should be essentially a people's service, in which their general participation should be encouraged and assured. To this end its melodic character should be emphasized; the various melodies and formulae should be made uniform in all parts of the Church. Harmonization for the organ should be used so as to encourage and support, and not to discourage and hinder, the hearty, spontaneous participation of the people which is directly enjoined upon them both by rubric and by every consideration of the principles of common worship.

Under authority of General Convention this edition of the Choral Service is issued by its Joint Commission on Church Music; with the humble petition that where it is used the hearts of the people may the more fittingly be lifted up in praise of Almighty God.

NOTES ON THE CHORAL SERVICE

IN THE character of the musical setting accorded the various portions of Morning and Evening Prayer and of the Holy Communion respectively, a marked difference is to be noted. In the former the chant form is employed for the Psalms and Canticles; for the several Versicles with their Responses, for the Creed, and for the Prayers, a simple monotonic recitation is provided with or without inflections; while certain portions of the services should be read and not sung. For the Litany, through the supplications, an ancient melodic formula is used; to which the English text was adapted in 1544, as already noted (p. iii).

At the Holy Communion the ordinary chant form is no longer admitted. The prescribed manner of singing the Epistle and Gospel differs from that provided for the lessons in I Edward VI, although the latter is seldom employed today. Intonations are provided for the Creed, for Gloria in excelsis, and for the Lord's Prayer, to be sung by the celebrant; the Introduction to the Lord's Prayer is set to its ancient music; and the unity of Sursum corda and the Preface is emphasized by the similarity of their traditional musical settings. Again certain portions are read, as befits both their character and their relationship to the service as a whole. Under the ancient system Kyrie eleison, the Creed, Sanctus and Gloria in excelsis were dignified by special melodic settings, varying in elaboration according to feast or season, and intended for congregational use. Since the introduction of polyphony these portions of the service have afforded the greatest composers in all countries opportunity to enrich the Church's musical repertory by special settings worthy of their high office.

In the absence of official standards, the choral rendering of the services has not been attended by that uniformity of use which its liturgical character and association demand. In their original development the melodies and formulæ gave musical expression to Latin text; the task of their adaptation to the vernacular, never officially provided for by the Church, has been accomplished at various times and by various persons with consequent lack of uniformity. However, close analytical study by many scholars has of late demonstrated the principles involved in adapting the ancient melodies faithfully to English prose sentences, with their different order, and their much greater proportion of prominent monosyllables. If any variations from accustomed use are observed in the following pages, it will be recognized that while the Commission has been guided by what it believes to be the authoritative tradition of the Church, it has adapted the same to her present liturgical use and to general conditions; while retaining unimpaired the spirit of the ancient musical forms and the principles which have ever governed their relation to the words of the service.

The Choral Service being essentially melodic in character, any accompaniment by the organ or harmonization for the choir must be regarded as extraneous, even though permissible under certain conditions. For this reason the Choral Service is set forth in this book in melodic form, without harmonization or accompaniment. For the benefit of those who may desire to continue their accustomed use of the organ, accompaniments to portions of the music for Morning and Evening Prayer, to the Litany, and to those portions of the Holy Communion commonly sung by the people, have been provided in an Appendix. In the latter will be found also the harmonized setting of the Preces and Suffrages by Tallis, which long ago became traditional in the Anglican Church. They are given here in their harmonization in four vocal parts, and in such notation as will best insure their rendering in the spirit of their composition.

Notes to Choirmasters

If organ accompaniment is used, it should be confined exclusively to those portions of the services assigned to the people. The Priest should never be accompanied by the organ. Only light eight-foot stops should be used, generally without pedal; since the employment of the organ in this connection is wholly for practical rather than for artistic reasons.

The Choral Service is the musical expression of prose texts, and its melodies derive their rhythms from those of the words to which they are set. Metrical rhythm is thus wholly inadmissible, and the greatest care must be taken to exclude it entirely from the rendering.

With a choir the best results will be obtained by the following procedure: (1) Have the text alone read, at a moderate speed. Take care that every syllable is distinctly enunciated, and given its proper relative value or stress; that undue pauses are not made at punctuation marks, and that the natural accents of the text are brought out clearly, although without exaggeration. (2) Repeat this recitation without rhythmic variation, but upon a monotone. (3) Sing the text to its prescribed melody or formula, still without rhythmic variation.

The text of a Response should be sung at the same pace as that of the preceding Versicle or text.

(Note: The singing of Responses when the Versicles are read, or of Amens to Collects and Prayers which are recited, although a common practice, is inconsistent with the theory and rationale of choral service.)

In many texts to be sung in the Choral Service, as in a majority of Psalm verses in the Prayer-book version, one or more of the initial syllables of each sentence or half-sentence are unaccented, the first accent falling upon a subsequent syllable, viz.:

And gránt us
As it wás in the beginning
For it is thóu, Lord, only

In all such cases great care must be taken to avoid accenting the initial unaccented syllable or syllables. All words and syllables should be rendered lightly until the first accent is reached, after which subsequent accents are given the value which characterizes good reading.

If two accented syllables are in juxtaposition, the first must be slightly prolonged as well as accented, to preserve natural diction, viz.:

The Lord's Name be praised
For it is thou, Lord, only
O let the earth bless the Lord

MORNING AND EVENING PRAYER

The Opening Sentences, Exhortation, Confession, and The Lord's Prayer.

These portions of the service being of an introductory nature, it is appropriate and in accordance with the best precedent that they be read and not sung.

The Preces

Melodic formulæ according to ancient use. These should be sung with great dignity, and with due regard to the normal retard and softening of the closing phrases.

Antiphons on Venite, exultemus Domino

The use of these Antiphons or Sentences, which were finally adopted by General Convention in 1925, is optional. In a measure, they restore to the service the ancient Invitatories, which were sentences of similar character, sung not only before Venite, but also repeated, completely or in part, at intervals through the Canticle, and again before and after Gloria Patri. Each Invitatory had its own melody, corresponding with one of the special settings of Venite.

When Venite is sung to an Anglican chant, the Antiphon may be sung to the same music. The pointing of the Antiphons for Anglican chanting will be found at page 46 of the Appendix.

For the convenience of those desiring to employ the Gregorian chant, the Antiphon may be sung to the melody provided in the Appendix at page 41 in the Mode of the tone chosen for Venite. The melodies there set forth have been adapted from among the simpler Antiphons of the Sarum office books.

The Creed

The Creed should either be read, or monotoned. In the latter case, its final phrase may receive the same musical treatment as that assigned below to the Suffrages. Anciently, after the first phrase of the Creed and of the Lord's Prayer had been said by the Officiant, the rest was said secretly by all until the penultimate phrase. This was sung by the Officiant in the manner of a Versicle, thus enabling the Congregation to respond with the final phrase. As this is no longer the prescribed manner of saying the Creed and the Lord's Prayer, we recommend retaining the inflection on the last phrase only, if at all.

The Resurrection of the body: And the Life everlasting. Amen.

and the power, and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord's Prayer may be treated thus only when transferred to a point immediately before the Suffrages, as permitted by the rubrics.

The Suffrages

The syllabic termination of each Ψ . and \Re . determines the inflection at the end of the monotonic recitation. If the last word of the sentence is a monosyllable, the medial inflection is used, thus:

u - pon us.
save the State.

If a word of more than one syllable, the moderate inflection, thus:

sal - va - tion.
right - eous- ness.

The Collects

The Collect for the Day, with the second and third Collects, should be sung in the manner prescribed for the Collect in the Communion Service. (q. v.) The Amens to all sung Collects should be monotonic. The succeeding prayers and the Grace should be read.

THE LITANY

The Choral Litany is printed as arranged by Archbishop Cranmer. The earlier portions are sung to two melodies adapted from the ancient setting of the Litany. From "O Christ, hear us," the first of these melodies and the formula of the Suffrages, as at Morning Prayer, are substituted for the more elaborate setting of earlier times.

THE HOLY COMMUNION

The traditional music for the Holy Communion recognized the division into three classes of those portions of the service which were assigned to the people, viz.: (1) The Ordinary, or invariable texts, including Kyrie eleison, (of which the Lesser Litany, when used, is the counterpart) the Nicene Creed, Sanctus, and Gloria in excelsis. (2) The Proper, of which no example is retained in the Prayer-book office (except possibly the Offertory Sentences) but which formerly included the Introit, Gradual, Offertory, Communion, etc. (3) The Responsory, under which head fall Gloria tibi, Sursum corda, the Lord's Prayer after the Prayer of Consecration, and the Amens to Collects and Prayers. The Responses to the Decalogue properly belong to the latter class; although not having been a part of the Liturgy prior to 1549 they possess no traditional melody, and English composers have been accustomed to treat them as a part of the Ordinary, like the Creed and Sanctus.

If the people are to join in singing those portions of the service which are included in the third category, it is obvious that their melodies should be fixed, and not change from week to week, as it is quite proper that the modern or ancient setting chosen for the Ordinary may do. The traditional musical system of the Church provides these melodies, varying but slightly in festal and ferial forms; a distinction to which it is not over-important to adhere. In the present edition Gloria tibi and Sursum corda are given their traditional melodies, as well as the Lord's Prayer anciently sung by the Priest alone.

In the absence of a traditional melody for the Responses to the Decalogue, it is recommended that each parish adopt one setting, or at the most, two or three; which will be used to the exclusion of all others: thus affording the congregation the opportunity to join in making the Responses, as they are directed to do by the rubric. A setting based on Merbecke's Kyrie is provided on page 19.

Choral Responses to the Decalogue should not be used unless the Commandments are sung by the Priest. If the Decalogue is read, the Responses should be recited by the congregation. (See note on p. x.)

When the Decalogue is omitted, the Summary of the Law should be read, not sung. But if the Summary of the Law follow a sung Decalogue, it should likewise be sung.

For those portions of the service which are assigned to the Celebrant and his Ministers, equally definite provision is made by established tradition. For the Proper, consisting of the Collect, Epistle, and Gospel for the Day, and for the Blessing, monotonic recitation with inflections governed by fixed rules; for the Preface, a special melody; for the endings both of the Prayer for the Church and of the Prayer of Consecration, custom of long standing permits the use of a special melody, which is that of the Latin per omnia saecula saeculorum, and uniform with the close of the Lord's Prayer. (See page 34.) The initial Lord's Prayer and the Collect for Purity, formerly and logically a part of his private preparation, should be recited, not sung, by the Priest.

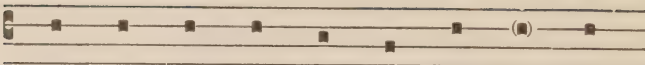

As provided by the rubric before the Lesser Litany, the Collects may be preceded by "The Lord be with you," which should be sung in monotone with its Response, and followed by "Let us pray," of which the music is that traditional for Oremus. (See page 19.)

The Tone of the Collect

The Collect for the Day consists normally of four parts: the Address, the Petition, the Oblation, and the Doxology. This structure is clearly brought out by the melodic formula, which consists of monotone followed by a cadence at the close of the Address; an inflection at the first convenient pause in the Petition; the same inflection at the close of the Oblation; and the first cadence immediately before the concluding phrase of the Doxology.

The Cadence is of one fixed accent with two preparatory notes. The last accented syllable of the Address and of the phrase preceding the last phrase of the Doxology always falls upon the accented note. For example:

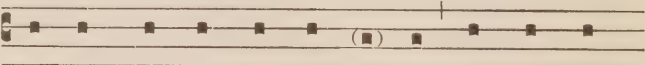

The Cadence

I Advent	vi - sit	us	in	great	hu - mil - i - ty;
III Advent	to	pre - pare	thy	way	be - fore thee;
Christmas		born	of	a pure	— vir - gin;
II Epiphany	all	things	in	heav - en	and earth;
Septuagesima		hear	the	prayers	of thy peo - ple;
Easter	gate	of	ev - er	last - ing	life;
Trinity		to	wor - ship	the	U - ni - ty;
V Trinity		or - der - ed	by	thy	gov - er - nance,

The Inflection

The Inflection consists of a drop of a semitone; normally, but not invariably, on an unaccented syllable. For example:

IV Advent	through	Je - sus	Christ	our	Lord, to whom, etc.
Whitsunday	a	right	judg - ment	in	all things,
Whitsunday		Christ	Je - sus	our	Sa - viour, who liv - eth, etc.
II Trinity	Keep	us,	we	be - seech	thee,
IV Trinity	up -	on	us	thy	mer - cy;
XXII Trinity	free	from	all	ad - ver - si - ties,
St. Thomas	through	the	same	Je - sus	Christ, to whom, etc.
Transfiguration	the	King	in	his	beau - ty, who with thee, etc.
St. Matthew		thy	Son	Je - sus	Christ, who liv - eth, etc.

Should the Collect commence at once with the Petition, the Cadence should be used in place of the Inflection, which should be omitted.

When the Collect does not close with the Doxology, but with the Oblation only, the Cadence should be sung instead of the Inflection. The following examples illustrate both cases.

Examples of Endings

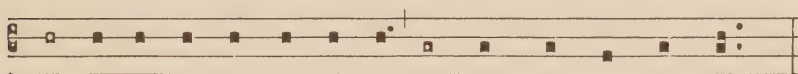

I Advent	thee	and	the	Ho - ly	Ghóst,	now	and	ev - er.
II Advent			in	our	Sa - viour	Jé - sus	Christ.
III Advent			Spirit	ev - er,	one	Gód,		world, etc.
IV Advent			be	hon - our	and	gló -	ry,	world, etc.
St. Stephen	Medi -	a -	tor	and	Ád - vo -	cate.
St. John Evang.		thro'	Je - sus	Christ	our	Lord.
Circumcision	thy	Son	Je - sus	Christ	our	Lord.
Quinquagesima	only	Son	Je - sus	Christ's		sake.
IV Lent	our	Lord	and	Sa - viour	Jé - sus	Christ.
III Easter		thro'	our	Lord	Jé - sus	Christ.

XII Trinity	of	Je - sus	Christ,	thy	Són,	our	Lord.
XXIV Trinity	our	bles - ed	Lord	and	Sá -	viour.
St. Thomas	be	all	hon - our	and	gló -	ry,	now	and, etc.
For Peace	of	Je - sus	Christ	our	Sá -	viour.

The Collect may be monotoned without loss of its choral character. Another Tone will be found in the Appendix.

The Tone of the Epistle

The Epistle is announced and chanted slowly and solemnly in monotone, except when a question occurs. Questions are sung as follows:

de - sire to be un - der the law, do ye not hear the law?
 one re - ceiv - eth the prize?
 Are they Is - ra - el - lites?
 Are they He - brews?
 What is that to thee?
 What shall I cry?
 Who is this?
 What then?
 What?

If the question be short, it is recited on a note a semitone lower. If it be long, the first part may be sung on the ordinary reciting note, and the last phrase should begin a semitone lower. The last three syllables always take the cadence as above.

The separate articulation of the final syllable "ed" demands much care, wherever it occurs. When it would fall on the rhythmic beat, or would throw another weak syllable on the rhythmic beat, it should, if possible, be merged in the preceding syllable.

She hath receiv'd of the Lord's hand
 His mother answer'd and said
 They determin'd to send relief

When it falls between two accents, or is the final syllable of a phrase or of a sentence, it should be pronounced, but very quietly.

One of them named Agabus
 He shall be revealed, and all flesh, etc.
 How he would have him called

There is no authority for a change of note on the last accent of the Epistle: but it may be somewhat stressed on the same note. Another Tone will be found in the Appendix.

"Here endeth the Epistle" should be said, not sung.

The Tone of the Gospel

The Gospel is announced and chanted in a solemn monotone, with a fall of a minor third on an unaccented syllable before the last metrical foot; except when a question occurs, which is to be sung as in the Epistle; and except for the last sentence, which has a special Conclusion, as will be seen below. The chant of the Announcement, Response, and Gospel is invariably uniform.

The Holy Gospel is written in the second Chapter of Saint Luke, beginning at the fifteenth Verse. Glo - ry be to thee, O Lord.

The Gospel Cadence

In the Cadence care must be taken to avoid singing an accented syllable to the lower note: and also to avoid any accent or stress on the final syllable "ed," when (as is by no means infrequently the case) it is not more euphonious to merge it in the preceding syllable.

	be	gin -	ning	at	the	first	Verse.
		at	the	twen -	ty -	fifth	Verse.
		at	the	for -	ty -	séc -	ond
the	powers	of	heav -	en	shall	be	shá - with	power	and	gréat	glo -
			your	re -	demp -	tion	dráw -
			till	all	be	ful -	ffill -
shall	not	be	of -	fend -	ed	—	in the	gos -	pel	préach'd	to them,

The Conclusion

In the Conclusion, the group of three notes, the first of which is both accented and a little lengthened, always falls on an accented syllable not less than the fourth nor more than the sixth from the end.

shall	pre -	pare	thy	wáy	be -	fóre	thee.
	and	shall	shéw	it	ún -	to	you.
	though	one	róse	from	the	—	dead.
		shall	táste	of	my	súp -	per.
but	my	wórd	s shall	not	páss	a -	way.
	his	bró -	ther	their	trés -	pass -	es.

Other Tones will be found in the Appendix.

The Gospel may be monotoned without loss of its choral character: but if so, Gloria tibi should obviously be monotoned also. If the Gospel is read, Gloria tibi should be read. The optional response "Praise be to thee, O Christ" should be said, not sung.

In singing the Collect, Epistle and Gospel, the Priest should aim at very distinct enunciation of the words; and should adopt such a pitch as will make them audible to every person present.

The Intonation of the Creed

The Intonation of the Creed is invariable, unless it be followed by a plainsong setting other than the original ancient melody. The invariable Intonation should precede a setting of modern composition. In either case the words of the Intonation should not be repeated, Choir and people continuing "the Father Almighty."

The form of the Intonation has been the subject of most careful study, based upon minute analysis of the ancient melody. This melody is a true chant, whose various cadences are always definitely related to the rhythm and meaning of the associated words. The original Intonation is this:

Both the accent and the root meaning of Credo fall with the first syllable on the higher note; the personal ending on the lower. If we substitute "I believe in one God," this order is reversed, the unaccented personal pronoun falling on the more prominent note; and we also lack enough syllables for the musical phrase at unum Deum, a phrase never altered in the original. We have therefore chosen for the Intonation that portion of the original chant which is set to the words et ex Patre natum, which have the precise rhythm and accent of "I believe in one God." The notes, therefore, correspond to the meaning and flow of the English words with the same fidelity which characterizes the setting of the original Latin words. Other settings will be found in the Appendix.

The Offertory

The Offertory Sentence or Sentences should be said, not sung, by the Priest.

The Prayer for the Church

This intercessory Prayer, preceding as it does the devotions preparatory to Holy Communion, is out of immediate relationship to the choral portions of the service. No musical inflections are provided in the older Liturgies for the corresponding prayers, except in the single instance of the Solemn Collects on Good Friday, which cannot be considered a precedent here. It therefore seems advisable that the Prayer with its Amen should be read. An optional setting of its final phrase, previously mentioned on p. xiii, will be found in the Appendix.

The Preparation for Holy Communion

The Exhortation, Confession, and Absolution, forming a section by themselves in preparation for the people's reception of Holy Communion, should be said. The Comfortable Words are also included in this category. That they are frequently sung is due to a misconception of their position in the service, in which they are sequential to the Absolution, and not connected with Sursum corda. The character of Sursum corda as the initial portion of the most solemn part of the service is emphasized by the resumption of musical rendering, in a melody which is continued naturally in the Preface immediately following.

(Note: It should be observed that the Comfortable Words were omitted from Merbecke's setting of the Liturgy in which they had recently been incorporated. The fact is significant, but has often been overlooked.)

Sursum corda and The Preface

The ancient setting of this portion of the service is perhaps the most venerable and widely known of Christian melodies. It has been studied with exhaustive scrutiny, in order that the adaptation of the English words should completely conform to the established relationship between words and music in the original. The pace should be dignified, and the tone well sustained. The Celebrant should not sing faster than do the Choir and Congregation. Both must be careful in singing the group of three notes, wherever it occurs, as at the word "lift," to accent and to lengthen the first of them—not the last. The music will be found on page 26.

The Proper Prefaces are printed from the point at which variation in the musical setting is necessitated by the text. The words of Sanctus should follow the ending of the Preface as closely as possible.

The Prayer of Consecration

The Prayer of Consecration should be read clearly and distinctly, so as to be audible throughout the Church. The restoration of the Lord's Prayer, with its introductory words, to its former place immediately after the Prayer of Consecration, makes it desirable that the concluding phrase of the latter, in accordance with ancient practice, should be sung by the Priest. The Amen after the Prayer of Consecration is the most important assigned to the Congregation. It should not be sung by the Choir alone, but by all the faithful. The music will be found on page 34.

The Lord's Prayer

The music of the Lord's Prayer, with its introduction, will be found on page 34. Merbecke's arrangement of the ferial chant, widely in use, will be found in the Appendix.

The Prayer of Humble Access

The Prayer of Humble Access should be recited by the Priest, not sung.

The Prayer of Thanksgiving

The Prayer of Thanksgiving may be monotoned if desired; or else recited.

Gloria in excelsis

Gloria in excelsis should be intoned by the Priest; Choir and people continuing "and on earth peace, good will towards men." In the traditional plainsong settings of Gloria in excelsis the Intonation varies with each setting. It seems wise to adopt a single Intonation for invariable use with polyphonic settings.

Collects Before the Blessing

Should an additional Collect or Collects be sung immediately before the Blessing, the melodic formula is the same as at the Collect for the Day.

The Blessing

The Blessing has its own historic inflection, to be found at page 35. If, as is also perfectly permissible by ancient precedent, it be said, the succeeding Amen should also be said.

THE LITANY OF THE ORDINAL

As a new and briefer Litany and Suffrages for Ordinations has been added to the Book of Common Prayer, it has been set to the musical phrases of the ancient Litany in the Sarum service books.

JOINT COMMISSION ON CHURCH MUSIC

A Table of Musical Notation

The traditional musical notes and signs used in this edition are the following:

The C clef: the line on which it is placed indicates what is known in modern music as the tonic of the diatonic major scale.

The F clef: its line indicates the subdominant of the diatonic major scale.

The flat indicates the lowering of the seventh note of the diatonic major scale one half-tone. In Gregorian music, no other note of the scale is ever chromatically altered.

These three notes are of equal time value. The second is written only in descending groups. The third indicates accent.

The Clivis. The upper note is sung first.

The Podatus. The lower note is sung first.

The Scandicus. The lower note is sung first.

The Climacus. The upper note is sung first.

The Torculus. In the second group, the last note is softly prolonged.

The Quilisma group. The lower note is sung first, lengthened, and accented; the second note is sung lightly.

A horizontal line over a note indicates that it should be both stressed and lengthened.

A dot after a note indicates that it should be doubled in length.

The Guide indicates the position of the first note on the next staff.

The various forms of the Bar indicate longer or shorter pauses.

The Double Bar indicates the final close, or the close of a section.

Minister

O Lord, deal not with us according to our sins.

Neither reward us according to our iniquities.

Let us pray. O GOD, merciful Father, who despisest not the sighing of a contrite heart, nor the desire of such as are sorrowful; Mercifully assist our prayers which we make before thee in all our troubles and adversities, whensoever they oppress us; and graciously hear us, that those evils which the craft and subtilty of the devil or man worketh against us, may, by thy good providence, be brought to nought; that we thy servants, being hurt by no persecutions, may evermore give thanks unto thee in thy holy Church; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Minister and People

O Lord, a-rise, help us, and de-liv-er us for thy Name's sake.

Minister

O GOD, we have heard with our ears, and our fathers have declared unto us, the noble works that thou didst in their days, and in the old time before them.

¶ Minister and People

O Lord, a-rise, help us, and de-liv-er us for thine hon-our.

Minister

Glo-ry be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Ho-ly Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end.

A-men. From our enemies defend us, O Christ. Graciously look upon our afflictions. With pity behold the sorrows of our hearts.

Mercifully forgive the sins of thy people. Favourably with mercy hear our prayers. O Son of David, have mercy upon us.

Both now and ever vouchsafe to hear us, O Christ.

Graciously hear us, O Christ; graciously hear us, O Lord Christ.

O Lord, let thy mercy be showed upon us;

As we do put our trust in thee. Let us pray.

WE humbly beseech thee, O Father, mercifully to look upon our infirmities; and, for the glory of thy Name, turn from us all those evils that we most justly have deserved; and grant, that in all our troubles we may put our whole trust and confidence in thy mercy, and evermore serve thee in holiness and pureness of living, to thy honour and glory; through our only Mediator and Advocate, Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Collect for Septuagesima noted in full ○ LORD, we beseech thee favourably to hear the prayers of thy people; that we, who are justly punished for our offences, may be mercifully delivered by thy goodness, for the glory of thy Name;

through Jesus Christ our Saviour, who liveth and reigneth with thee and the Holy Ghost ever, one God, world without end. Amen.

The Epistle for Septuagesima noted in full

The Epistle is written in the ninth Chapter of First Corinthians, beginning at the twenty-fourth Verse.

KNOW ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorrupt-ible. I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I, not as one that beateth the air: but I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway.

The Gospel for the Fourth Sunday in Advent noted in full Minister. The Holy Gospel is written in the first Chapter of Saint John, beginning at the nineteenth Verse.

People. Glory be to thee, O Lord.

THIS is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou? And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not.

Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No. Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself? He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias. And they which were sent were of the Pharisees. And they asked him, and said unto him,

Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet? John answered them, saying, I baptize with water: but there standeth one among you, whom ye know not: he it is, who coming after me is preferred before me, whose shoe's latchet I am not worthy to unloose. These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

Pointed for Chanting to Psalm Tones printed above

In this method of pointing, the figures 1 to 8, corresponding to the eight Psalm Tones, (with P representing Tonus Peregrinus), are printed above the first syllable in each half verse which changes from the Reciting Note. The Intonation is used only at the beginning of the first verse, and moves at the same pace as the Recitation. Traditionally, the first half verse is sung by one or more Cantors, the Choir joining in at the second half verse, and continuing the verses antiphonally from side to side. Gloria Patri is sung in the regular antiphonal alternation; but if no Antiphon follows, the words "world without end. Amen." may be sung by the full Choir. Musical completeness undoubtedly inspired the ancient custom of repeating the Invitatory Antiphon after Gloria Patri. It was also sung, in whole or in part, after verses 2, 4, 7, 9, and 11.

Variant Melodies

For the

Choral Service

Alternative Tone for the Collect

At Morning and Evening Prayer, and at the Holy Communion

The following Tone, still widely in use, with slight variants, is the most ancient manner of singing the Collects. It consists of an Inflection sung at the close of the first or second phrase, preferably ending with an unaccented syllable; and likewise sung at the close of the first or second phrase of the Doxology: and of a Cadence with one fixed accent and two preparatory notes, sung at the end of the Petition and of the Doxology. The Reciting Note is la; and after the Inflection, the Cadence, or any other pause, the first syllable of the ensuing phrase, like the first syllable of the Collect, is sung to sol. If the Collect closes with the short ending, the second Inflection is omitted.

O LORD, we beseech thee favourably to hear the prayers of thy people; that we, who are justly punished for our offences, may be mer-ci-ful-ly delivered by thy goodness, for the glory of thy Name; through Jesus Christ our Saviour, who liveth and reigneth with thee and the Ho-ly Ghost ev-er, one God, world with-out end. R̃. A-men.

Alternative Tone for the Epistle

The following ancient melody, once in general use, may be preferred for the Epistle. It should be attempted only after minute and careful preparation, and by trained singers. It consists of recitation with a Medial Cadence of two fixed accents and one preparatory note, at a colon, semi-colon, or other important pause: and of a Final Cadence of two fixed accents before a period. Questions are sung as above on page xv. A special Conclusion, which must always be most carefully adapted to the sense of the words, ends the Epistle. If a sentence in the Epistle be without a central pause, or be too short, the Medial Cadence is omitted.

The Announcement

The Epistle is written in the fourth Chapter of Galatians, beginning at the first Verse.

The Medial Cadence

Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an in - cor - not as one that beateth the air: but I keep under my body, and bring it in-to subjection: lest that by an - y means, when I have preach-ed to others, I my-self should be a cast - a - way.

Alternative Tones for the Gospel

The following ancient melody, the oldest of several similar forms once in general use, may be preferred for the Gospel. The Reciting Note is la, as in the Alternative Tone for the Collects. Although the intervals are different owing to this changed Reciting Note, the forms of the Medial Cadence, the Question, and the Conclusion are the same as those just given for the Epistle. The Final Cadence before a period consists of a drop of a whole tone on the last accented syllable of each sentence.

The Final Cadence

The Gospel for St. Bartholomew's Day noted in full

The Ho -ly Gospel is written in the twenty-second Chapter of Saint Luke, be - ginn - ing at the twenty-fourth Verse.

R^y. Glo-ry be to thee, O Lord.

AND there was al-so a strife among them, which of them should be ac-count-ed the great-est. And he said un-to them,

The kings of the Gentiles ex-er-cise lordship o-ver them; and they that ex-er-cise author-i-ty up-on them are call-ed ben-e-fact-ors.

But ye shall not be so: but he that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief, as he that doth serve. For whether is greater, he that sit-teth at meat, or he that serveth? is not he that sitteth at meat? but I am among you as he that serv-eth. Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations. And I appoint un-to you a kingdom, as my Fa-ther hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my ta-ble in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judg-ing the twelve tribes of Is-ra-el.

Another form of this ancient Tone has do for the Reciting Note, and is precisely similar to the form given for the Epistle in every respect except the Final Cadence of each sentence. The Medial Cadence, the Question, and the Conclusion, are identical with those of the Epistle. Gloria tibi is sung as on page xvi.

The Final Cadence

ac - cord - ing	to	Saint	Mat - thew.
ac - cord - ing	to	Saint	Mark.
un - to him,	fol -	low	me.
a -	rose	and	fol - low'd him.
they	shall	be	com - fort - ed.
ye	shall	know	them.

The last accented syllable of the sentence is always sung to the clivis.

ORGAN ACCOMPANIMENTS AND VOCAL HARMONIES
TO
THE CHORAL SERVICE

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE HARMONIZATIONS

THE following harmonizations are provided for the guidance of organists who may wish to accompany as much of the unisonous chant of the several Offices as may be needful; and for the convenience of choirmasters who may desire to have certain of the melodies sung with vocal harmony by the choir. Unlike the melodies themselves, which have been set forth in the preceding chapters, and which, except for their adaptation to the English text, are traditionally authentic, and not properly subject to variation, instrumental accompaniment and vocal harmony are wholly of modern origin.

In the composition of the accompaniments here provided, the utmost care has been taken to follow the spirit and rhythm of the ancient musical idiom, and to conform to those methods of harmonization which are the approved practice of the best contemporary authorities: including strict adherence to Mode. Nevertheless, these accompaniments may fittingly be replaced by such other harmonizations, either composed or extemporary, as shall fulfil these conditions with equal fidelity.

It has been thought desirable to confine vocal harmony to the Preces and Suffrages at Morning and Evening Prayer, and to the Litany. All other portions of the Choral Service of Choir and Congregation should be sung in unison; although, if thought wiser, certain of them may be accompanied by the organ.

NOTE TO ORGANISTS

The Chant of the Priest and of the Ministers should never be accompanied by the organ. When it is necessary to give the pitch of anything to be sung by them, or to play over an Intonation for the guidance of the Celebrant, the softest practicable stop should be employed.
